CHOKED TO DEATH IN HOP ALLEY.

An Opium-Crazed Chinaman Murders a White Woman.

STRANGLER IN THE NIGHT.

Dora Wagner Found Dead in a Hop Alley Shanty After Her Murderer Had Escaped.

"Hop alley," the lowest, most terribly degraded quarter in St. Louis, was roused Monday morning from its heavy opium-sleep by a murder.

Dora Wagner, the white consort of Chinamen, was found cold and stiff in her bed-choked to death.

There was no evidence of a struggle, but the blue marks around the neck tell too plainly how her life was wrung from her.

One Chinaman is under arrest and another is being hunted for by the police.

The theory upon which the officers are working is that Jui Jung, the discarded lover of the woman, murdered her in jealousy.

Dora Wagner had been living in Hop alley for two or three years. Her real name was Meyer and she was said to have come originally from Wisconsin.

Tall, well formed, with a wealth of fine black hair and dark gray eyes, she by no means looked the degraded creature she proved herself to be.

It is almost two years now since she began living with Jui Jung. He was a worthless sort of a fellow and the hop tongs down in the alley used to wonder why Dora had him around.

The wonder was not because he was a Chinaman, for that is the proper thing in this quarter, but because he was a bad Chinaman.

Jui Jung was a gambler, and an unlucky one at that, but he thought well of Dora and did the best he could. When it came his way at fan tan cards of hop were plentiful, and what more could a denizen of the alley really want?

But by and by Jui's happiness received a jolt.

Lup Kay, a thorough-going Chinese sport, showed up one day. He had plenty of the long green in his blouse pockets and a manner that might be stretched in dashing.

intment, went away muttering strange sounds of incantation in the language of his country.

No one living ever saw him in those rooms again.

He was noticed about the alley Sunday with his long pigtail hanging near to the ground, but he did not go near the woman who had discarded him.

The olintment with which he had anointed Dora made her terribly sick. The next day he remarked to her most intimate friend, Maud Williams, who also lives with a Chinaman, Yeck Lee, at 15 South Seventh street. The two women became so alarmed about it that they drove to the office of Dr. Ryan at 140 Pine street to consult him.

The physician gave her something for her ailment. Sunday she felt pretty well again. She was seen at the alley window looking up and down and grinning at the Chinamen in the windows across the way, as though she were never better in her life.

In the evening her friend Maud Williams came over to see her. They sat in Dora's room for a time, receiving visits from friendly clients. At midnight they were seen chatting together in the gangway. There was no hint of any trouble for either of them at that time.

Shortly after this Maud Williams went home. She got up Monday morning and

TWO-THIRDS RULE DOOMED.

No Longer Any Doubt That the Free Silver Men Will Control the National Convention at Chicago.

Gov. Stone, State Treasurer Lon V. Stephens, George W. Allen, Nicholas M. Bell, Joseph K. Rickey and Joseph W. Mercer, the rich banker of Independence, composed the Executive Committee provided for by the conference of the Chicago delegates, with other friends of Mr. Bland, held in St. Louis Saturday. Gov. Stone is Chairman of the committee.

Treasurer Stephens started the Bland campaign fund by subscribing $500 at the executive session of the committee Saturday afternoon.

Gov. Stone will call a meeting of the Executive Committee in this city within the next week to take up the practical details of the work of advancing Mr. Bland's candidacy.

Headquarters will be opened in St. Louis, and the various bureaus will be placed in charge of able and experienced men.

Prominent men in every county in the State will be designated as the agents of the Finance Committee to secure subscriptions for the general fund to be disbursed from headquarters in the payment of the expenses of the men sent into all parts of the country in the interest of Mr. Bland, for the equipment and maintenance of an effective literary bureau and the other items of expense necessary to carry on the great work.

It is estimated that less than $10,000 will meet all of the requirements in view, and there will be no difficulty in raising this amount.

Treasurer Stephens will go to Chicago to procure Bland headquarters for convention week, and will give a report of his stewardship in this particular to the Executive Committee when it meets here in response to Gov. Stone's call.

Col. Rickey wrote a letter to Senator Blackburn, urging him to support Bland, inquiring of the distinguished Kentuckian if it were true, as he had been heard to say, that he was weakening in his fight in the Blue Grass State.

"I know Mr. Blackburn too well to believe these silly stories about his weakening," said Col. Rickey to a Post-Dispatch reporter this morning.

He has received my letter by this time and I expect an answer from him by Wednesday. When I get it I will give it to the Post-Dispatch for publication, and I feel certain in advance that in it Blackburn will repudiate all the wild rumors.

ing him with a compromise with the goldbugs on any basis. The manner in which they have treated him shows that he has nothing to hope for from them, and I believe he will go to the limit of his power to help the party win in November. If Bland is nominated I will go into the fight with especially hearty good will.

"Another favorable sign of the times was contained in a letter recently received from John R. McLean, proprietor and editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer," Col. Rickey went on to say. "In this letter McLean asked me to keep him posted on the fight for silver in the West and Southwest, and to intimate his desire to enter actively into the campaign in Ohio if he were assured of our ability to control things at Chicago. McLean's paper has never wavered in its fight for silver, but McLean appeared to take no personal part in the campaign against Senator Brice last fall, and Ohio went to the goldbugs by default. But McLean is a tremendous power in Ohio politics, and if he is aroused to action in this campaign all the Brices in Christendom can't keep the Buckeye Democratic from swinging back into the free silver columns this year.

"We are not uneasy about Bland. The nomination can't escape him with a 16 to 1 platform. He is the biggest man I have ever known or seen in public life. I live at Washington twenty-five years and have known all the men who have fought to help the party win in November. If Bland is nominated I will go into the fight with especially hearty good will.

BOLD HOLD-UP IN THE LINDELL.

H. C. Pulliam Has a Close Call From a Stranger.

ATTACKED IN HIS ROOM.

A Visitor Who Turned Out to Be a Robber, Demanded Money and Got a Small Sum.

An attempt was made to hold up a guest of the Lindell Hotel in his room Saturday night.

The affair was to be kept a profound secret, but the story leaked out just the same.

The man on whom the attempt was made was H. C. Pulliam, Treasurer of the Louisville Base Ball Club.

The would-be robber, blackmailer or whatever he was, succeeded in getting away with a small slice of Mr. Pulliam's worldly fortune.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday evening a stranger walked up to the Lindell Hotel clerk counter. He didn't look the sort of a man one usually sees about hotels.

His clothes looked as if they had long since forgotten who made them.

Yet there was a certain air of respectability about the man. He was tall, of athletic build and twirled his dark mustache nervously as he looked over the register.

When he had looked up and down the list of names several times he asked Clerk Childsey whether Mr. Pulliam was stopping in the house.

He was told that Mr. Pulliam was a guest and walked away apparently satisfied.

For ten minutes he haunted the lobby, walking up and down, his eyes turned to the floor as if in deep thought.

Then he went back to the desk and said to the clerk: "I think I'll send my card up to Mr. Pulliam."

He started to write a card, but tore it up and asked the number of Mr. Pulliam's room. It was given him, and he said that as he was an old friend of Pulliam's, he would go right up to his room.

Mr. Pulliam had just returned from the ball game when he heard a knock at his door.

He opened it and found the stranger outside. The stranger rushed forward and grasped him by the hand. "I'm glad to see you," he said. "It's been a long time since we met. What you don't know me? I'm one of the boys. I've played ball all over the country. You'll surely remember me when I tell you my name."

The stranger, still holding Pulliam's hand, was edging into the room all the time.

that would stop at nothing to encompass his design.

He kept up a running fire of threats and abusive epithets.

All the while Pulliam was trying to assure him that he had no money.

"You, you lie, and you know it," said the stranger, and then he toyed suspiciously with the rear right-hand pocket of his trousers.

This was the last straw.

Pulliam began to seriously contemplate giving up the $200. Then he decided to parry, "course," he said to the stranger, "I must have met you before, but I don't remember you."

Pulliam went to the lady, cashier and made a request sotto voce.

She handed out a $2 bill.

The next minute the bill was in the stranger's pocket and Pulliam was making a bee line for the elevator to get as far as possible from his visitor.

The stranger looked at the $2 bill contemptuously as if he thought the game was not worth the candle.

Mr. Pulliam has no idea who the stranger was.

He looked as if he might be a broken-down ball player, but beyond that and the fact that he got $2 dead easy nothing is known of him.

member you. I always like to help out one of the boys and I'll give you some money. I haven't got a cent with me though. You'll have to go down to the office with me."

He repeated this proposition three or four times before the stranger consented.

He had barely finished his sentence when the door cracked, the fastidious flow of and the crowd tumbled into the cabin.

For a moment there was wild confusion. The "white caps" who had pushed the door open had fallen on the floor inside the shanty, when the door gave way, and as they fell their followers crowded in on them before they could get up.

There was a scuffle among them, and for a while it seemed as though they would fall to fighting each other.

But when they all gained their feet, the leader, over 6 feet in height and apparently a young man, advanced to get up and dress. While he was obeying this command, "white caps" stood to either side of him with a loaded revolver at his head, threatening to shoot if he made any demonstration.

While waiting for him to dress, a number of the gang got into a corner and discussed among themselves loud enough for all to hear what they would do with him. One suggested that they tie him to a tree at the back of the shanty and give him 100 lashes across the back with switches.

Other suggestions were offered, but the one agreed upon was to stake him out on his back on the ground, fasten each foot and hand down with a stake and start a slow fire about him, not making him burn, but near enough to make him uncomfortable.

When Moulton was dressed they started to lead him out of the door, but he stopped and begged piteously to be killed quickly rather than endure the torture planned for him.

His pleadings were not heard and he was jerked out into the yard.

Then came the disgusting and revolting incidents which turned the "white caps" from their original motive.

The two men who had held the revolver to Moulton's head while he was dressing remained in the room after he had been led out, and with them remained three and a half dozen others, who pushed Moulton for presuming to live with a white woman, though they doubtless collected him for the restless form of the weeping girl served to give the guard a new and baser object.

She was dragged from the bed and repeatedly outraged before her mother, who was held at each side of her head.

The men on the outside of the cabin were holding a council as to the best place in which to punish Moulton when they who had made themselves criminals inside the shanty, came out and invited their comrades "white caps" to join in.

Some of the "white caps" were so horrified that they fled, but the rest, who had been told that Moulton was a white woman, and the rest of the 11 masked men broke and ran, some one way and others another.

Twelve hours later the outrage was reported to the police.

Officers Callahan, Mehan, Hogan, Loomis and Cavanaugh, arrested Albert Spangle, William Brown, Robert Schwartz, Garrett Collins, H. J. Thomas, Thomas Foy at South Avenue, and Natural Bridge road, where they were discussing a matter which they refused to tell the police.

At the Sixth District Station Emma Fischer and her mother positively identified Garrett Collins as the man who committed the assault and recognized Spangle, Brown and Schwartz as members of the gang.

All of the men under arrest refused to talk, and in the meantime the men who had been told that Moulton was a white woman, and the rest of the 11 masked men broke and ran, some one way and others another.

Mary Fischer said she saw Jack Bruggeman, Ed Collins, and the man who was in the band of "white caps," and the police are now looking for them.

TAYLOR MUST HANG.

Justice Brower Peremptorily Refuses a Writ of Error.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 27.—The appeal of Virgil Conkling, attorney for or, for a writ of error to compel a new trial was peremptorily denied by Justice Brower in Chambers to-day.

The application for the writ and a new trial was not well founded, and could not be sustained by the facts presented, and there was no reasonable ground for a new trial. In rendering the decision Mr. Justice Brower said that there was nothing in his decision that would prevent Conkling from applying to any other Justice, but it is extremely improbable that the writ will be granted. It is considered certain now that Taylor will hang to-day.

THE TAYLOR HANGING.

Preparations All Made to Prevent a Rescue.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARROLLTON, Mo., April 27.—Rumors are persistent that an effort will be made to rescue Taylor during the trip from Carrollton to St. Louis. Sheriff Stanley will be prepared for anything of the sort. The train will be heavily guarded by determined men.

The execution is set for 11 a. m. April 30. The stockade in which Bill is to be hanged is very substantially built. There are accommodations inside for about 300 people, and it will be crowded. The stockade is 48 feet square and is built of stone and brick. It is situated on the south side of the west side of the jail. It runs past the jail and is 11 feet along the west side of the jail. It is in the middle of the south part of the enclosure.

There is a story going to the effect that George Taylor was even in the north part of this county last Friday.

THE WEATHER.

PILOGG GIVES WARNING.

Republicans Cannot Afford to Ignore Silver Sentiment.

WEST AND SOUTH ARE SOLID.

On a Free Silver Platform the Democrats Would Easily Sweep Those Sections.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—Ex-Gov. William Pitt Kellogg has just returned to Washington from Louisiana, where he has been managing the campaign in the interest of Speaker Reed.

"The Louisiana delegation," said he, "will not be for McKinley. The situation in the South is very foggy, and may remain so up to the meeting of the convention. I do not, however, see any walkover for McKinley. The tremendous sweep which the free silver sentiment is having in the South and West. It is no use for the Republicans to try to shut its eyes to it. There will undoubtedly be a strong effort made to prevent the Democratic convention at Chicago from adopting a free silver platform, but the outlook is decidedly favorable to the adoption of such a platform. The Republicans will have a very hard fight to make. If this is done the Democratic party will carry every Southern State, with the notable exception of Maryland and West Virginia, and every State west of the Missouri, except, perhaps, Nebraska. Then they will put up a terrific fight for the control of the Central Western States. Both the Republican and Democratic conventions adopt gold standard platforms and the silver element would nominate such a man as Cameron or Teller, the election would be thrown into the House of Representatives, where the three highest candidates would be balloted for by the State delegations in each State and give proper weight to the influence which the campaign itself will have upon the action of the representatives from certain States you will see that the election of a free silver President by the House of Representatives is not impossible."

KENTUCKY DEMOCRATS.

The Silver Men to Make a Hard Fight in Convention.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 27.—Something is going to drop in Kentucky, and when it does the goldbugs will have to wonder who cut the string. There is now not the shadow of a doubt that the approaching Democratic State Convention will bring on a determined battle between the goldbugs and the silver men. A week or so ago it looked as though efforts to patch up peace and avoid a further breach in the party would be effective. But the last few days have told a different story. The silver men are making a desperate effort to win the election and they will move heaven and earth to win the State Convention. The goldbugs are determined to make the election of a free silver President by the House of Representatives is not impossible."

The trouble grows out of the meeting of the Democratic State Executive Committee, which has just closed here, in which the goldbug members decided to resort to the old plan of calling a convention in the counties for the selection of delegates to the State Convention. This plan was opposed by the silver men, who were voted down on the committee, but they were not deterred. In addition to this, the committee departed from the usual course of adopting the vote of the county as the basis of representation and decided to have the election of delegates on the basis of the largest vote. It is no secret that the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, Hon. Charles S. Long, who Mr. Carlisle addressed his recent letter, which was generally regarded as an announcement of his presidency, had been working with the free silver people to secure their support of the Secretary on the ground of his value in Kentucky and that some of the leaders had agreed to let the matter go over to the State Convention. This tickled Mr. Long to death, as it did the other friends of the goldbug. The plan was all fixed to skip the currency question entirely in the convention and if possible bring the party convention without a clash. Now comes the whole scheme in a letter smothering the whole scheme into a thousand pieces by declaring that under no circumstances will he desire the endorsement of the Kentucky Democracy unless it is accompanied by an expression in favor of gold as the standard of value. In other words, after his friends had tried to avoid a scrap, in the interest of his chances, Mr. Carlisle knocks the whole house of cards and demands a fight—something which the goldbugs are not willing to do. So the goldbug members of the Executive Committee were obliged to accept the wishes of Carlisle. They succeeded in making the matter a dead issue, but they ever thought they could get. The furnace by June 5 the date of the convention, will be heated seven times hotter than it was, and the consequence will be that the goldbugs will be beaten. It is a very child of destiny, he will get the worst thrashing a politician ever received in this State.

REED'S CLAIMS.

Manley Thinks He Has a Good Chance Yet.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—Joe Manley scouts the claims of Grosvenor for McKinley. He stands by the figures given out by Mr. Aldrich a week ago and elaborates it by the evidence of the week. His conclusions are as follows:
Reed 161,000
Grosvenor 100,000
Other candidates 21,000
Total 282,000

GROSVENOR'S FIGURES.

The Strength of McKinley Seems to Grow Wonderfully.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—Gen. Grosvenor has given out his regular weekly statement of McKinley's votes and he declines to make any figures upon other candidates' strength, confining his figures to a compromise between McKinley's votes and the number necessary to a choice. He also declines to discuss the accuracy of the tables of votes of anybody, and said to-night:

"I rely with absolute confidence upon ultimate results to vindicate my figures. It is remarkable that in this week, so near the close of the election, so many of the McKinley's strength stands to-day as follows:

PIRANS

TABULES

Mr. Martin Idol, a prosperous

White Cloud, Kansas, is 45 years old, and one of the most popular men in his neighborhood, where he has lived for a dozen years at least. On the 10th day of August, 1905.

Tabules, said to Frank Newlin,
Editor of the White Cloud Globe:
"For three years I have been suffering from dyspepsia and stomach trouble and have tried down to the "hot water" remedy with varied success. Last spring I noticed Ripans Tabules advertised in your paper and bought a package considerably better, and to-day I am still using them with a fair prospect of being cured. I keep them in the house all the time and
